SAMPLE DATA PLATE – DIRT DEVIL

Layouts vary depending upon the style of data plate, however most of the information is standard regardless of where it is located on the dataplate. For earlier Dirt Devil models, the plant code is a separately identified item on the data plate, but newer models/data plates have the Plant code unidentified and following the MFG code.

READING THE MFG CODE:

The MFG code on a vacuum consists of a letter, two numbers, and a letter. The first letter corresponds to the month of manufacture (see chart). The two numbers correspond to the year of manufacture. The letter at the end corresponds to the revision code or "series" of the machine. A major design change that renders parts not compatible with previous design should result in an increase in revision level, or series, of the machine.

MFG CODE A12A translates to a machine that was manufactured in January of 2012, and is the first design version (series A).

1 Year Warranty

In 2010 this serial number format was implemented for commercial models and dealer-exclusive models. The first 7 characters of the serial number are the same as the first 7 characters of the model number. If the model number contains less than 7 characters, then zeros are used to fill in up to the 7th character. The 8th and 9th characters denote the month of manufacture. The 10th and 11th characters denote the year of manufacture. The remaining 8 characters are the serialization numbers of the machine. This example translates to a model CR50075 that was manufactured in October of 2010.

Oreck uses the Julian calendar system for date coding products. The date is shown on the Data Sticker (Product label) as shown below. The first two digits represent the year (2006 in the label shown) The remaining three digits indicate the day of the year – in the label below it is the 95th day of the year 2006. I have also attached a Julian date code finder. This information is helpful in establishing the date of manufacture for warranty.
